Dear State University System Presidents,

Following our recent discussion, the following is to confirm that faculty who are teaching in the classroom may provide alternatives for certain students. While this is consistent with past practice, including pre-COVID, we recognize your commitment to returning to the classroom and want to be clear that teachers teaching in the classroom should still be able to assist students who want to stay current.

Students who are directed to quarantine or isolate, should work with faculty members individually to identify alternative methods for completing course requirements during their period of isolation. Alternatives may include any means and tools normally utilized to accommodate students during periods of absence from class.

Sincerely,

Syd Kitson
Chair
Florida Board of Governors
